Ashtead Station – Update

17th March 2013 by Richard Brooke

Following completion of the car park extension in October, Work started on the new building in November, following completion of the car park extension. The very wet weather in December and January has delayed the project slightly but good progress is now being made and the new building is planned to open at the end of May. The final phase, the removal of the old building and the restoration of the parking and circulation area, is scheduled for completion by mid July. There will then be 67 more parking spaces than before, and parking for 120 bicycles.

Ways of reducing the visual intrusiveness of the fencing to the car park extension, when seen across the Woodfield, are being explored.
